CHAPTER I. It was a cold frosty evening towards the lose of December when a young man, with At way a now a concept of the control of the little station at Camberton.

The traveler looked about him thoughtons of the little station at Camberton.

fully for a moment.
"Goin" up to the village, sir?" asked a short man in an overcost of rough frieze, strapping the snow from his boots.
"Yes," said the young man. "Is that four carriage?"

He pointed to a black covered wagon, raiginally interaled for wheels, but now pro-vided with runners.

"Yes sir. Jump in."

There was no difficulty about securing a seat. There were but two other passengers, a woman and a young child, who took the back seat. Our trayeler shared the front

CONGRESS. A disposition to dispatch business appear to have controlled the members of Congress since their assembling. A vast number of bills and resolutions have been introduced | ized, and it has to-day a good hotel-while for the preliminary stages of legislation. At one session the clerks were kept coutinuously reading for three hours, a fact, as they declared, unprecedented in the history of Congress. The impeachment question was disposed of in a summary manner, Although we have always viewed the neitation of this subject as one inexpedient because it would fail, it was not wholly agreeable to see it quashed so suddenly a vi almost unceremoniously. This action is not far short of a Congressional declaration of confidence in the President which, of course, a majority of the members do not feel.

Financial questions are so prominent and pressing that all others are considered of few rods of the trestle work. The following minor importance in comparison, though day he was surprised, upon going down to the Republican members are keeping their oves open to the work of reconstruction and will guard the process with a view to secure the organization of the rebel States on the Congressional plan. These two subjects ought to engrosa the attention of Congress until they are definitely settled. The country is uneasy with the fluctuation of opinions upon the financial question, and the uncertain value of the currency; and this can never be permanently assured until the reconstruction difficulties are in a

More Than was Contracted For. -The Providence Herald says Anthony Cluff, one of the contractors at the State Prison, was detected last week by General Viall in sidering the fact that Mr. Nilon had not tampering with one of the prisoners - a man been in regular training, this is certainly usured Joseph B. Wood, who is serving remarkable pedestrianism, and justifies his out a sentence for passing counterfeit moncy. It seems that Chafflad carried papers to and from the prisoner, clandestinely, and from sundry documents it is apparent that the contractor was endeavoring to procure through Wood the sum of one thousand dollars in counterfeit money, which money was to be obtained of Wood's former conederates. Upon the discovery of these procerdings Cluff was summaned before the warden, when he confessed his guilt. He, was given the alternative of leaving the State or being otherwise panished, and he left. Why he should have been granted this privilege is more than we can tell.

Good Pins:—The Standard says Messra Barker & Gifford, butchers, received at their stall in New Bedford on Friday last from Mr. Ebenezer Thurston, of North Darlmouth, two spring pigs eight months old, weighing respectively 395 and 360 lbs.

Sometime ago a boy was run over by a railroad train in Indiana and lost both teer. He sued the company and recovered $10, 000 damages. An appeal was taken and after innumerable delays the poor bay is—glad to compromise for $250, and pay his own cost. We seem to have read somewhere that corporations have no souls.

Last Saturday afternoon a nicely arranged conspiracy to get out of the State prison, at Trenton, New Jersey was consummated an blacksmith shop. They prepared themselves with short pieces of iron, which they concealed, and made other arrangements to facilitate the success of the conspiracy. Mr. Peter Ossenberg, a deputy keeper, had charge of the yard gate. The bell was rung from the outside by a man who had a team there, and some business with the institution. Mr. Ossenberg opened the gate and let in the team, and while the gate was open nine men rushed up. Mr. Ossenberg was alone, and of course was helpless, but the convicts took good care to make him more so by striking him on the head with a piece of iron pipe, which they had taken from the shop. The blow stunned Mr. Os-senberg, but did not seriously injure him. The conficts then passed out. Mr. Ossenberg, as soon as he received the blow, ran to the prison and gave the alarm. The officers railied. A man named Lennox, with a revolver, pursued the party. Five of the party took to the Delaware river, and finding a boat at the shore jumped in, and tried to paddle their cance without ears. By this time a number of persons had assembled, and among them Mr. Lennox, who, by the use of his revolver, compelled the abscording party to come back. Mr. Wright, one of the deputies, captured two of the party. Some boys followed one or London, Dec. 10.—Noon.—The action of the House of Representatives of the United States on the resolution for the Impeachment of President Johnson excites considerable comment. The Times this morning has an editorial on the subject, in the course of which it highly praises the House for its refusal to imprach the President, and considers this result as reopening the course of practical legislation. The Times expresses, however, fear that the President will accept the action of the House as a new indiscussent of his policy, and from this concludes that all hopes of a sound reconstruction must be deferred. mileage which was referred to them some time ago.

New members claim their mileages for what are considered two sessions of Congress—namely, those of March and July—and for the present acesture.

Although the subject was not fully decided by the committee to-day, it swins probable that ther will report against allowing any extra mileage.

Gov. Swann of Maryland has dishonorably dismissed the officers and men of three companies of the Eighth militia regiment because, when on parade in October, they groaned for libra sud cheered for Congress. Two other companies are publicly reprimanded for a milder form of the fame political independence. F.S. WINSTON, President. - -Twenty Million Dollars,
